PEOPLE'S POLICE OF CHINA: FEATURES OF ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE AND TACTICS OF ACTIVITY

Research article analyzes the features of the organizational structure and tactics of the People's Police of China, which plays a major role in the internal security system of the Chinese state.

It is noted that in recent decades, the People's Republic of China has made a huge leap forward – the country's economy took second place in the world rankings, in nominal terms of gross domestic product in dollar terms, it is ahead of only the US economy.

Attention is drawn to the fact that the Chinese police system is a hybrid model that combines centralized specificity with the characteristics of decentralization in management. The dual model of subordination has a number of clear advantages, as regional and local public safety authorities have independent powers to manage and plan police forces. The Chinese police use specific but effective methods of service to carry out their public security tasks. At the same time, the People's Police of the PRC is forcing the accelerated implementation of a strategy aimed at strengthening fits units with innovations in scientific technology that significantly increase the efficiency of policing.

The tasks of the Chinese Public Security Police are to ensure the peace and security of society. To carry them out, the public security police carry out the following activities: they are on round-the-clock duty in the serviced territory; are in constant contact with citizens during street shifts; patrol the reporting areas. At the same time, the Chinese police are forcing the accelerated implementation of a strategy aimed at strengthening of their units with innovations in scientific technology that significantly increase the efficiency of policing.

Of course, it is important for our country to study China's experience in the improvement of the organization of executive bodies that ensure internal security, which will expand the set of our ideas about ways of state building in law enforcement in the system of executive bodies of Ukraine, enrich and provide new quality of knowledge about the forms and methods of combating offenses. This, in turn, will allow more productive work on improving domestic legal institutions, find more constructive theoretical and practical solutions to problems in law-making and law enforcement activities of the internal security of Ukraine, as well as positively affect the rule of law in the process.
