suggests the author's own definition of this public law category. The peculiarities of public administration of the Ministry of Internal Affairs (hereinafter - MIA) in the field of internal security of Ukraine include, in particular, the following: 1) as a rule, law enforcement nature of the functions performed by administrative entities implementing state policy in this area; 2) the basis of this type of activity are management relations, which have their own specific structure and features; 3) the specific and normatively defined nature of the subjects of administration (security forces) and the objects of its provision; 4) the content of this activity is the establishment and protection of human and civil rights and freedoms, protection and defense of the interests of society and the state, territory and the environment from real and potential internal threats; 5) consolidation of objects of protection and defense by security forces at the constitutional level; 6) the existence of restrictions on the free circulation of information in accordance with the legislation on state secrets; 7) the possibility of introducing subjects of public administration of administrative-legal regimes of martial law and state of emergency; 8) the existence of democratic civilian control over the military organization and law enforcement agencies of the state.

Noted, that the organs of the MIA, being one of the most important subjects of law enforcement, are special subjects of public administration in the field of internal security of Ukraine. At the same time, in the context of hostilities in eastern Ukraine, the role of these organs as an important component of the security and defense sector is significantly increasing.

According to the content, the activity of the organs of the system of the MIA on public administration in the area of internal security divided into the implementation of executive and administrative activities and the provision of administrative services by the public administration. The main functions of the organs of the Ministry of Internal Affairs as special subjects of public administration in the field of internal security of Ukraine are divided into rule-making, law enforcement and defense.

Keywords: public administration, law enforcement, organs of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, internal security of Ukraine.
